10 SCI Principles

Field of all possibilities is the source of all solutions: During the learning phase of coming to know and understand what is separate from one self, through Transcendental consciousness, one can get in touch with the Self. This helps the individual to integrate the multiplicities and duality of material existence into the Oneness of Being.

Life is found in layers: The journey of life, from Pure Being to becoming a Whole Individual is a process found in many steps of curving up and away from the Self, exploring the smaller self and diversity of Self, and eventually curving back on the Self again with a deeper experience.

Outer depends on Inner: Considering the history, problems and nature of existence in American Indian communities, we can see how the outer is reflecting the inner. That there is a disconnect with TC at it’s root, which is in effect creating disharmony in the outer.

Nature of life is to grow: Through understanding this connection to a deeper Being and Oneness, we can see how we are missing links in our life, culture and communities and move towards greater fulfillment through TC. This learning and changing is a natural part of evolution and life.

Whole contained in every part: Even in the objective realm, we can see that at the root it is based in Pure consciousness. Therefore, even science and math are tools of consciousness connected to the Unified Field. When we see this, the wholeness of PC can come through in any and every topic.

Knowledge is gained from inside & outside: Intellect and experience are developed by the outer circumstances we are living through, and also the inner state of mind, body and emotion. This is constantly changing as our circumstances and inner experience are moving, growing and evolving and influencing each other.

Seek the highest first: In order to see the fulfillment of dharma and life purpose of being of service, it is necessary to develop the Self thoroughly so that the radiance of harmony and bliss is naturally overflowing towards others.

Harmony in diversity: There is a value for each different culture, community, person, animal, plant. Each has it’s own place, appropriate to the local laws of nature of which it developed and what community it participates in. All is rooted in the same Unified Field. Seeing that everything is essentially different expressions of the one pure consciousness, we can see a great beauty and harmony in diversity.

Every action has a reaction: The more we understand about ourselves, the more we understand about our journey, our culture and our purpose, the more we can serve others to create more harmony and peace on Earth. Everything that I do has an impact on my life and also on others directly now, or indirectly in the future. Understanding this, we can take more value into the way we intentionally live our lives more positively.

Whole is greater than the sum of its parts: Two cultures can be appreciated for their individual offerings to mankind, both have the same value as they are rooted in the same UF. However, the whole of the diversity is much richer and vibrant than any isolated part.
